OA: Wanted to update you on the various work related to blockades. The issues of the blockades are serious and have been meeting daily to address this. From an economic standpoint this is having a massive impact. Shifts have been cut by automakers. But this has also challenged our ability to project a safe, secure economy for investment. The blockade is happening on municipal streets, so Windsor is the police of jurisdiction. I've spoken min. Mulroney to offer assistance and raise just how seriously we take this. I spoke with sec. Pete and they offered any assistance that we might need. I want to give a shoutout to Irek K who has been on top of this. Been meeting with stakeholders in the auto sector, retail council, food manufactures. All reiterated the same point that this is a high priority. We are tackling this as a whole of government and making sure that Ontario knows it is their jurisdiction

M3: Thank you to all who are joining and for those who have provided updates. Mona, Yasir, Irek, Vance, anita and others. Wanted to do this to stay connected. Will add to what Omar has said. Most importantly we have been working with the most affected Municipalities to ensure that police forces are getting the resources they need from the RCMP. There have been charges laid, more enforcement action taken against jerry cans to. There was some restoration of a quiet and calmer Ottawa but as we head to the weekend that there has been an uptick. Was pleased to announce we are sending a second wave of RCMP. Bill and I are in regular contact with mayor Watson and chief Soly. Ambassador bridge is a concern. The devastating effects on the economy certainly focuses the mind. I know Windsor has put in a request for RCMP help and pleased to say that they will be deploying there under the command of Windsor who is the POJ. Hope there will be some action soon to clear the lanes. Have also given additional resources in Coutts. We also saw the blockade in Emerson and know the RCMP is moving quickly to take action there. At all times have been in close contact with provinces so that they can take appropriate steps to ensure our supply lines.

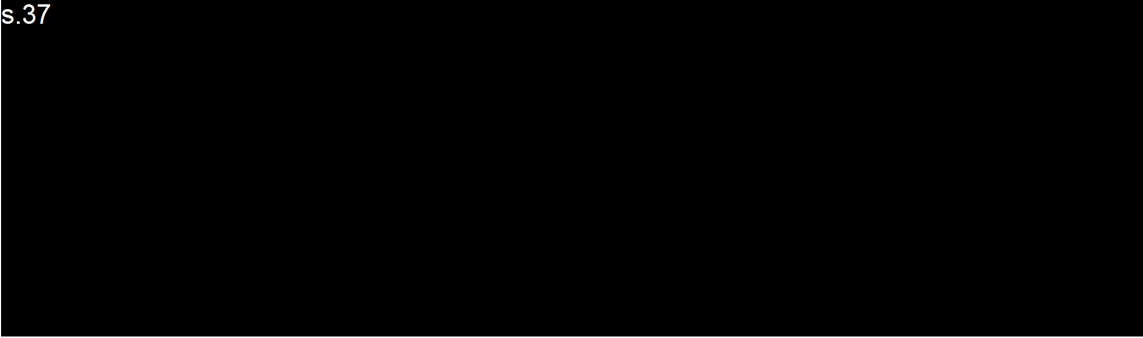

BB: I'm sure that you are all hearing about issues around jurisdiction and I know Canadians don't want to hear that. There have been good communications between us and Ontario about Ottawa and Windsor. The Premier and AG brought an application to prevent the distribution of all funds through gofundme and gosendgive. Because we are talking about supply chains and completely integrated economies, we have been in touch with the white house and governors mansion in Michigan. The Americans have offered all supports and there is good collaboration taking place. The entire gov and PM are engaged on this issue.
